Principal's Message

Greetings:

To a splendid group of young people who are not satisfied with anything but the best in whatever they undertake.

It is never easy to evaluate the value of a high school yearbook. It tells us something of the spirit of progressiveness and cooperation that prevails with the pupils of the school and the staff. They are sensitive to the proper balance between subjects and related activities. The acquisition of knowledge, the building of character, individual progress, and group developments are all a very important part of the educative process.

The keynote is to be the type of person who will at all times be a constructive force in the community in which one lives, realizing that one does not attain success by pushing others down, but that all humanity will ultimately rise or fall together. Let it be the aim of each of you to help to make the world a better place, even if it calls for you to make personal sacrifices at times.

Dr. Sam P. Jones
